

Storytelling For Schools

"Once Upon A Bus" provides a creative storytelling environment, on a customised double-decker bus, with sessions primarily focussed at, but not limited to children aged 0-12 years in the UK. Through the use of mixed media including puppetry, role play, music, film and special effects, in an engaging and interactive setting, we provide a fun space in which to learn about and explore the many facets of language and communication, through traditional storytelling.

The vehicle has been designed to provide distinct spaces that engage key activities, to promote both the desire and the ability to learn. State-of-the-art technology and visual projections provide an "immersive experience" that entertains, captivates and inspires our audiences without compromising the "real-world", face-to-face environment and traditional storytelling values that underpin our vision. Creative storytelling has been shown to improve literacy whilst helping to build a "confidence in learning" for both children and parent/carers.

Our service delivers a range of educational activities to children and an opportunity for their parent/carers to engage in a positive and productive social environment.

Once Upon a Bus is especially well positioned to service schools; providing tailor-made experiences to support project themes, specific genres/authors and the National Curriculum.

Group Sizes

The bus has been designed to accommodate an average classroom size of children and carers on the upper deck and sits 20 people comfortably downstairs. Adults accompanying children have use of a seating area at the back of the upper deck (the book corner) which can seat 8 comfortably.

The length of each session is tailored for each school dependent on the number of children in each class. We have been able to cater for a school of 420 pupils with 20 minute workshops over a school day.

Children are encouraged to interact throughout and are encouraged to read parts of the story where possible.

"The Once Upon A Bus came to be part of the prestigious Children's Literature Festival at Eagle House School on 18 and 19 September 2015. The magic and creativity of Arti and Matthew could not be faulted as they narrated and shared stories with children over the two days. Boys and girls entering the bus are taken to a new world and the brilliance is that the bus evolves into whatever theme has been planned. From the moment they assemble outside to watch the magical Bubble Man, the children are entranced. Arti's characters are played out brilliantly and she leads them on a journey through the bus, reading and sharing and fully immersing children into the world of storytelling. We could not have been more delighted with the response from the children after their adventures on the Once Upon A Bus. They have not stopped talking about their experience and there is no doubt that the bus helped make our Festival a huge success. If your children love stories they will adore the bus and I would urge you to let it park up at your school and create its magic."
